People in the News

Former Atlantan Gail Levin (center) with members of the Dogwood Festival court. Left to right are Leigh Lee Keng, Georgia Tech art director Cassandra Tellier; Terry Honick, festival queen; Levin, Carla Jean Herd, Kimberly Kennedy and Lisa Goldberg. The "Dogwood Darling," Melissa Gould, is in front.

Gail Levin, a graduate of Northside High School in Atlanta and now curator at the Whitney Museum in New York City, was in Atlanta recently to judge the Atlanta Playhouse Theater's Eighth International Art Show, which is co-sponsored with the Georgia Tech student center.

"The Dogwood Festival marks my favorite time in Atlanta," Levin said. She chose eight selections from the 41 entries from around the United States. They were judged on the basis of creativity, originality and technique.

Levin, who has a Ph.D from Rutgers University, joined the staff of Whitney Museum as curator of the Hopper collection. Her research on Edward Hopper will result in a total of four publications and four exhibitions. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barron Levin.

Levin has lectured widely and written numerous articles on modern American and European Art, organizing studies for the Modern Museum of Art and Tate Gallery.

A talent show, conducted by Jean Shapiro, was also featured after the art show reception.